THE CHRISTIAN DUROSTORUM-DRASTAR

Silistra, the antique Durostorum the Middle Age Drastar, is amongst the leading centers of Christianity, Christian culture and civilization in Dobroudja. Here from the end of the 3rd the beginning of the 4th c. there was an early Christian community, in which brighten up the 12 saints, who died as martyrs between the years 303 and 362. Material evidence of their martyr history is two martyr temples and a grave, in which a golden ring with early Christian symbols was found.

The martyr glory of Durostorum is a base for creating a bishop desk about the year 380, which was headed by Merkurian-Auxentius, a student of the apostle of the Goths Ulfila. In the mere centre of the city were raised basilicas and a bishop's palace. With the arrival of the Asparuh's proto-Bulgarians in the end of the 7th century was set the end of the early Christian past of Durostorum. The early Middle Age Drastar became a pagan center, for which is evidence the temple of Tangra from the 9th century and several sacrificial altars, which were found in the city. After the conversion of the Bulgarians in 865 Drastar became again a bishop center, which was headed by bishop Nikolay, for whom we have the evidence of an inscription from the year 870 and seals. Then on the shore of the Danube was raised a cathedral basilica and western from it a residence. In 927 the Drastar bishop Damian became the first Bulgarian patriarch. The cathedral basilica was reconstructed into a patriarchal beehive temple; the residence became a patriarchal castle. Here in the 11th-12th c. found residence the Byzantine bishops, and in the 13th-14th c. the Bulgarian metropolitan bishops. Silistra is a metropolitan city also during the Ottoman epoch from the 15th to the end of the 19th c.
